Molly's Gift

IT wasn't that Molly Peterson tried to get herself and other people into trouble, it was simply a talent with her—a mysterious gift that she shared perhaps only with great personages of the past in whom this talent became history. In fact, her father, Harold Peterson, remarked after one disaster.

"If you had power, you'd be dangerous to humanity."

"Really, father? Do you think someday I'm going to be another Mata Hari or something exciting?" Molly queried.

"I have no doubt of it; no doubt at all. When the world's on fire, I'll know who lit the match," Harold Peterson grunted.

"Oh, father, you're so wonderful to think such nice things about me," Molly said enthusiastically and gave him a big hug. "See you later. Have to meet the kids at 'Pops'. If Joey calls, tell him it's alright for Saturday night."

"Yes, Molly," Mr. Peterson answered absent-mindedly.

"And, father, may I please have five dollars?" Molly asked sweetly.

"For what?" Peterson roared.

"Oh, dear, you have such a bad memory. For that darling blouse I saw in Finnian's window yesterday. You said I could have it. You said so right in front of mother. You said . . ."

"Alright, alright. Here, take it. But this is the last thing you're going to buy this month, understand, young lady?" Again Harold Peterson grunted and went back to his newspaper.

The blouse was still in Finnian's window, but Molly happened to look in Smith's Pet Shop and there he was, the kind of dog she had always dreamed of having—a St. Bernard pup, on sale for only five dollars.

Molly stood in front of window running her finger in a circle that the pup tried to follow with his big, clumsy paw from the inside. He looked at her with his large, sad, brown eyes and she melted into a small drop of acquiescence.

"I'll take that St. Bernard pup you have in the window," Molly told Mr. Smith, handing him the new, crisp five dollar bill.

"Now, hold on, Molly. Do you have your parents' approval to buy a pet? You know what happened to the parrot, the monkey, the two Siamese cats and the Doberman pinscher you bought last year. They were all returned within three days," Jasper Smith warned, shaking his head sadly.

"Yes, I know I've been a nuisance to you, Mr. Smith, but the parrot just didn't like Daddy for some reason and kept calling him bad names. Mother was afraid of the monkey. The two Siamese kittens tore up the new drapes and the furniture. The Doberman ran off with the plans for a bridge Daddy had spent six months drawing up and ate them. That's why I had to bring them back, honestly! Otherwise we would have kept them all. It's alright to get the puppy. I promise I won't return him, no matter what. Please, Mr. Smith," Molly pleaded, a tear swelling in one clear, mischievous blue eye.

"Well, Molly, I don't like it. No, sir, I don't like it one bit. But alright, if your folks have given their approval. But mind you, young lady, if something happens this time, you'll have to find a good home for the animal yourself."

"Oh, yes, certainly, Mr. Smith," Molly vowed solemnly.

Still reluctant about the transaction, Jasper Smith went to the window and lifted the huge pup in his arms.

"He's going to be a big boy," Jasper smiled, stroking the St. Bernard's head gently. "He has to have lots to eat, too. Steaks and the like."

"Steaks?" Molly gulped. Suddenly she had a vision of herself mopping floors and washing dishes in all-night restaurants to pay for the animal's meals. But she buttoned her lip with determination as she watched Mr. Smith lower the St. Bernard into a wooden crate.

"Are you sure you can manage this, Molly? It's pretty heavy," Mr. Smith asked, breathing heavily from holding the dog for only a few minutes.

"There's Joey!" she exclaimed, pointing out of the window at a tall, broad-shouldered, high-school junior. "Joey! Joey!" Molly called, leaning out of the door.

"Oh, Hi, Molly," Joey replied, and then looked aghast as he realized where she was.

"Joey, could you help me with a package?" she asked sweetly.

"Molly! Not again!" he wailed. "What will your father say?"

"Why, he'll be tickled to death, of course!" Molly said, frowning and trying to give him the high sign to be quiet.

"Yeah, I'll just bet," Joey mumbled. "Here, I'll take that, Mr. Smith," he offered, lifting the crate. He almost staggered under the weight of the pup.

"He doesn't eat humans, does he?" Joey quipped as they walked out of the shop and into the street.

"No, steaks. And that remark wasn't funny, Joey Adams," Molly replied indignantly.

"Ohhh, brother, wait till your old man gets a load of this!" he persisted.

"My father isn't an old man and he isn't an ogre. He'll just adore Mr. Carmichael," she argued.

"Mr. Carmichael! Is that what you've named that mutt? Mr. Carmichael?" Joey screeched.

Molly simply glared at her companion and looked lovingly at the box.

Although Molly was absolutely sure her father would take to Mr. Carmichael like a bear to honey, she kept him hidden in the attic the first two days. Mr. Peterson thought he heard strange noises during the night, but decided after the first scratchings and thumps that the house was getting old and the shutters were banging in the wind.

It was midnight of the third day of Mr. Carmichael's arrival that a formal introduction was made. Shortly after twelve a terrible commotion that could be heard three blocks away aroused the Petersons from a deep sleep. They pulled on their robes and ran down the stairs to the living room where they found Mr. Carmichael with his teeth firmly grasping the pants leg of a burglar. The St. Bernard was growling ferociously.

"Good heavens!" Mr. Peterson exclaimed. "Who's that?"

"Mr. Carmichael," Molly answered proudly.

"Y-You know this thief?" Peterson bellowed.

"No, of course I don't. Mr. Carmichael is our new watch dog!"

And before Peterson could say a word to the policeman who grasped Mr. Carmichael's victim by the collar, the St. Bernard jumped joyously into his arms and kissed him solidly on the cheek.

"Well, at least he's useful," Mr. Peterson said, rubbing the gallant pup's head. "I think he can come down out of the attic and join the family."

"We're looking for people who like to draw"

BY ALBERT DORNE

Famous Magazine Illustrator

DO YOU LIKE TO DRAW? If you do —America's 12 Most Famous Artists are looking for you. We want you to test your art talent!

Too many people miss a wonderful career in art—simply because they don't think they have talent. But my colleagues and I have helped thousands of people get started. Like these—

Don Smith lives in New Orleans. Three years ago Don knew nothing about art—even doubted he had talent. Today, he is an illustrator with a leading advertising agency in the South—and has a future as big as he wants to make it.

Pipe-fitter to Artist

John Busketta is another. He was a pipe-fitter's helper with a big gas company—until he decided to do something about his urge to draw. He still works for the same company—but as an artist in the advertising department. At a big increase in pay!

Don Golemba of Detroit stepped up from railroad worker to the styling department of a major automobile company. Now he helps design new car models!

Profitable Hobby—at 72

A great-grandmother in Newark, Ohio, decided to use her spare time to study painting. Recently, she had her first local "one man" show—where she sold thirty-two water colors and five oil paintings. Now she happily looks forward to many vigorous, money-making years in art.

A salesgirl in West Virginia who liked to draw got a job as an artist, later became advertising manager of the best store in Charleston. A married man with three children —unhappy in a dead-end job— switched to a great new career in art. Now he's one of the happiest men you'll ever meet!

How about you? Wouldn't you like to trade places with these happy artists?

Free Art Talent Test

We want to help you find out if you have the talent for a fascinating money-making art career (part time or full time). We'll be glad to send you our remarkably revealing 8-page talent test. Thousands of people formerly paid $1 for this test. But now we'll send it to you free—if you sincerely like to draw. No obligation on your part. But act at once. Simply mail the coupon provided below to Famous Artists Schools, Studio 195-C, Westport, Conn.
